- Everything you need is just one application - The clock is visible on every corner of the screen - Easy to use and comfortable interface - Clean design and unobtrusive graphics Hi guys, today I introduce you to the new and exciting app named Room Limit. It's an app developed by the developers of the well-known Oasis – a small tool that allows you to use your mobile device as a remote control for your PC. To play any song you just need to click it, and the app will download it and play it, using your mobile device's sound system. The files displayed are the ones that are found in the selected folder. One of the best features of the Room Limit app is that the screen can be displayed in two different modes. You can play any of the files in the list from either the grid view or the list view. In order to play the track you just have to tap the file's thumbnail in the grid view. The list view contains all the files, with each file being marked as a favorite. The favorite files can be easily accessed from the Favorites menu. As I said, Room Limit is a clone of the well-known TunesGo, a very popular app. The app's creators must have developed this app very carefully. As I said, they were inspired by the
