U.S. District Judge Reed O'Connor ruled Friday that Texas could not block up to $100 billion in federal funds for the state's Medicaid expansion, striking down what had been the state's strongest weapon for killing the bipartisan plan. Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton said in a statement that he was "disappointed" with the ruling and vowed to appeal. But there's already a lawsuit filed in federal court in Austin on behalf of the federal government, which has a larger amount of money than any state in the nation to spend on the program. "We are hopeful that the Fifth Circuit will affirm Judge O'Connor's order," said Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton, who is representing the state on the lawsuit, "so that the Legislature can continue to provide critical health coverage for tens of thousands of its citizens." "The state has a duty to
