The invention further relates to the use of lysine transport inhibitors and to anticancer therapeutics comprising such inhibitors. Lysine transport inhibitors may be useful in methods to treat disease states or conditions associated with abnormal or undesirable lysine transport. Lysine transport inhibitors may also be useful in methods to treat cancer. Lysine is used as a building block in the synthesis of proteins. Lysine and its derivatives and analogues are also involved in a diverse set of cellular processes such as protein and histone methylation, spermatogenesis, and apoptosis. Lysine modification can be antagonized by lysine transport inhibitors, which block the transport of lysine from the extracellular space into the intracellular compartment. Lysine transport inhibitors are useful to modulate the function of lysine transport and thereby control lysine homeostasis. The lysine transport process is one means by which cells regulate lysine content. Lysine transport inhibitors may be used in methods to treat the cell growth disorders, inflammation, autoimmune diseases, metabolic disorders, and cancer, see e.g., WO 94/08577, WO 98/28609, WO 00/10596, WO 99/51263, WO 99/61476, WO 00/17245, WO 00/41563, WO 01/62738, WO 02/48121, WO 03/003483, and WO 03/007973, and U.S. Patent Application Nos. 60/278,455; 60/357,288; 62/022,565; 03/116,022; 03/166,150; 03/215,059; and 11/215,059, each of which is incorporated by reference in its entirety. Given: `int a[5][2][2];` //is this array allocating the memory for the first three entries of a? The professor then says that in order to initialize the first column, I need to use: `int a = new int*[2];` //in order to allocate the memory for the first entry of a `a[0] = new int[2];` //in order to allocate the memory for the 2nd entry of a `a[0][0] = 2;` //in order to initialize the first element of the array `a[0][1] = 3;` //in order to initialize the second element of the array `delete[] a[0];` //in order to deallocate all of the memory I get that this works and that each line was made to allocate the memory needed for the 2D array a, but I don't get why I need to allocate the memory for the first element of the 2D array, and not just the 1D array. Can someone explain this to me? A: In the first line, you are (for the sake of demonstration) initializing the array: `int a[5][2][2] = { {1,2,3}, {4,5,6} };` The second line allocates storage for a second array: `int a = new int*[2];` This will allocate 2 pointers to ints. After that, the next line of code is going to initialize the second array (2 rows, each with 2 columns) using the addresses returned by the operator new: `a[0] = new int[2];`
