Post-Secondary Educator of the Year (NACTEA), and I have also been recognized by the Notre Dame Magazine as a Notre Dame Alumnae “GEMS”. What Will You Be? In the fall of 2016, I completed my Master's Degree in Counselor Education at Loyola University of Chicago. I have worked in both the public and private sector. I am a public school, private school and military school counselor. Working as a school counselor has provided me with the opportunity to reflect on my own “GEMS”. My graduate studies have allowed me to dig deeper, to discover those things and characteristics that may have been masked, the things that perhaps I didn’t recognize or see. My field studies in both international and domestic schools have provided me with the opportunity to understand how culture affects learning. Who is studying, how are they studying, the tools they are using to study and the results they are getting from these tools. My cross cultural work has also helped me to understand more about myself, my own strengths and weaknesses. As an educator, I want to have my students see themselves as their best selves, and that in order for them to be their best selves, I must do the same. I want to help each of my students see the things in themselves that they may have missed and to realize their full potential. My passion for education stems from my own personal journey. In my own journey, I have become the educators, the counselors, the coaches, and the teachers I always wanted to be. I was prepared to become a soldier, I was prepared to play the role of a diplomat and learn the politics. I was prepared to become an engineer, but the Lord led me to pursue a degree in counseling. I was prepared to become a CEO, but after hearing about some of the things going on at the school, I started to cry. I was prepared to be a mom, but when my daughter was born, I knew from the moment I felt her birth that I was meant to be a teacher. I was prepared to be a friend, but I was ill and the friends that I thought I had, walked away. When friends turned away, I decided to be a sister. My education to date has made me a better student. I understand my limits and believe in myself. I understand I cannot control everything, but I can control my response and how I respond. I am

Residents of a tiny South Australia island say they are fed up with boats blocking their access to the ocean. Two weeks ago, a boat filled with crates washed ashore in the tiny community of Wreck Reef. Some residents said they believed it was being used to smuggle drugs, but they say they do not have the right tools to test this theory. "Look, I've got a bottle of vodka I'd like to sell you, but what am I gonna do? Chuck it in my car and then jump in the water? No, there's a bike and some other stuff too," resident Peter Larsson said. He said "smugglers" had arrived on the island and they were using a boat to take asylum seekers to Christmas Island. "They don't ask them, they just take them in whatever form of transport they're coming," he said. "We're just trying to get out there and do a good clean-up job." The boats will likely be gone by the weekend when the South Australian Maritime Safety Authority (SAMSA) returns.

"That's why it's really important that we go and muck it up," he said. "Cause once they get that stuff off the beach it'll be all these reports and they'll be able to pick up the cars and bikes and stuff and take them out to that boat and stuff that's been left on the beach." Residents in Wreck Reef are confused about where they can bring their boats if the authorities are not going to pick them up. (ABC News: Giulio Saggin) Ms Larsson said there was no point going to Port Lincoln for help, as nothing would be done for a week. "All my family in Sweden are going to phone up, saying 'are you going to pick up the boat?' But they're on the other end of the phone so I can't say, 'don't worry about it, it'll be fine'." GSA chief executive Bob Gillard told the ABC the operation to pick up the boats required a specialised crew and a helicopter. "We've got a lot of work to do to comply with the Protocol (which covers the issue of customs and immigration and the service of process for civil and commercial cases), which means that we'd have to get all the police involved, all the state fire service involved. We'd have to have the SWAT team on board, we'd
